GROHE EVERSTREAM

THE ENDLESS SHOWER

THE FUTURE OF
SUSTAINABLE SHOWERING

GROHE EVERSTREAM

THE SOLUTION FOR A WATER-STRESSED WORLD

Many of us take for granted that the water we need is there and always will be. But as the shortages and droughts that have hit Europe this summer show, we can't keep thinking this way. We need to change how we use water – and we need to start today.

Our resources are being stretched by the booming world population, and alongside the impacts of the climate crisis this is making drought and water scarcity into everyday challenges for more and more communities across the globe. In fact, almost one in three Europeans are affected by water stress in an average year.* And 11 out of the 17 most water-stressed countries are in the Middle East and North Africa.

So what can be done to help safeguard the planet's water? A key part of the solution is making homes – and particularly bathrooms, which account for over two-thirds of daily household water use – more efficient. Here, architects, developers and builders can help by installing products designed either to use less water or rethink how we use water.

But innovative new designs are needed to get the world where it needs to be. Today, GROHE is building on decades of work developing more sustainable products with concepts including the water-recirculating shower GROHE Everstream that encourages people to reuse water.

THE WONDER OF WATER

BUT IS IT ENDLESS?

WHAT IF IT COULD BE?

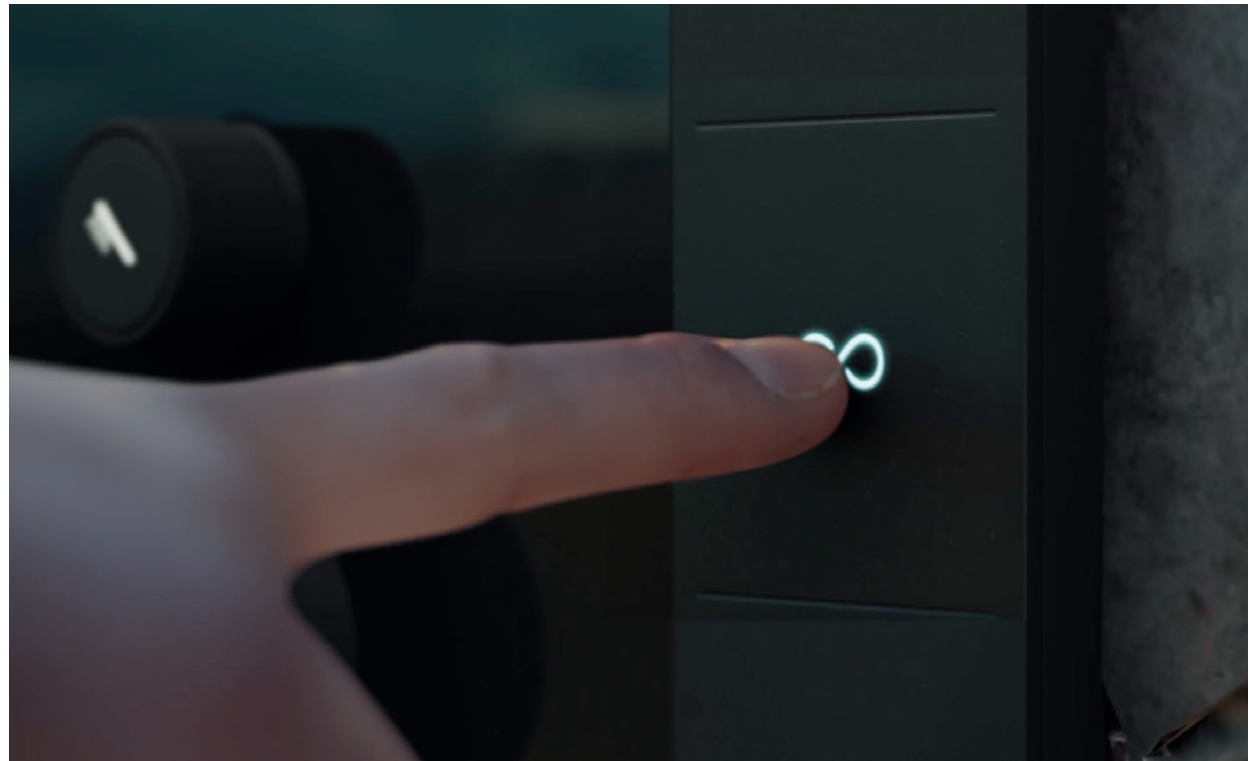

GROHE EVERSTREAM

HOW IT WORKS

GROHE Everstream demonstrates how the home can actively and positively shape our personal impact on the planet and its resources. It divides the shower process into three parts allowing users to enjoy the experience, safe in the knowledge they are minimizing waste.

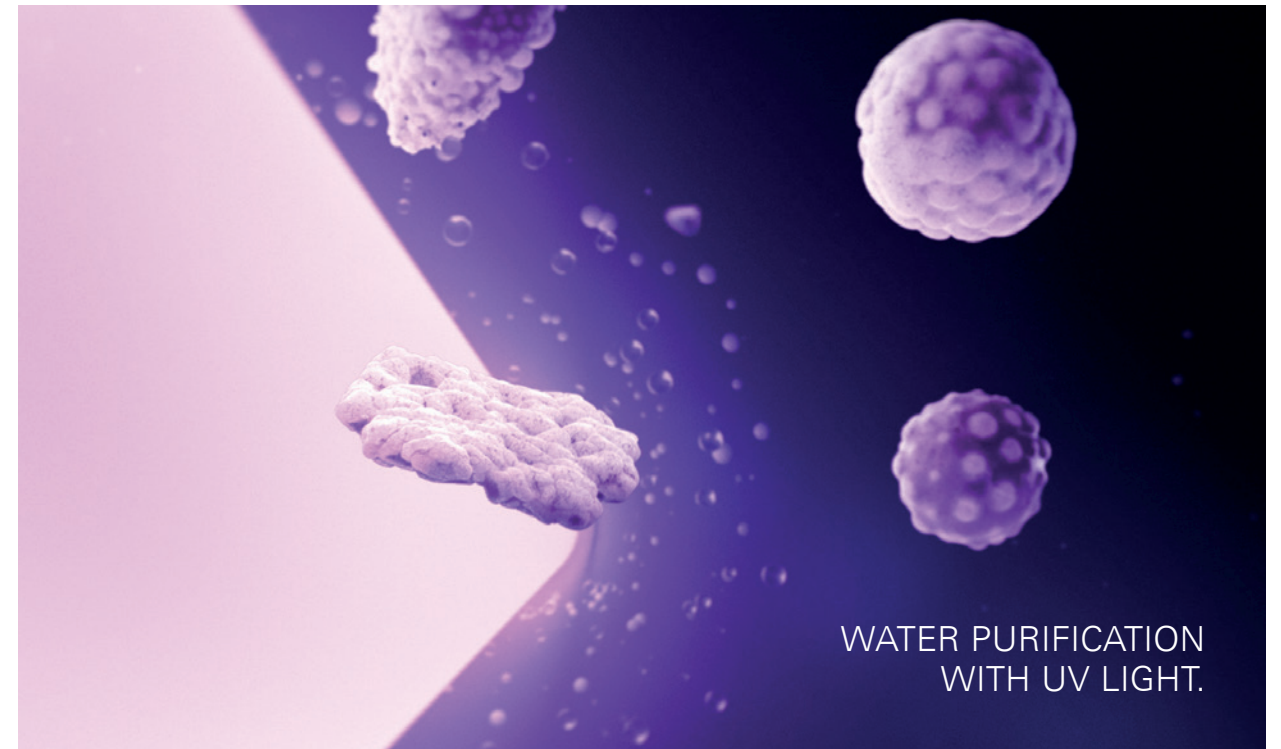

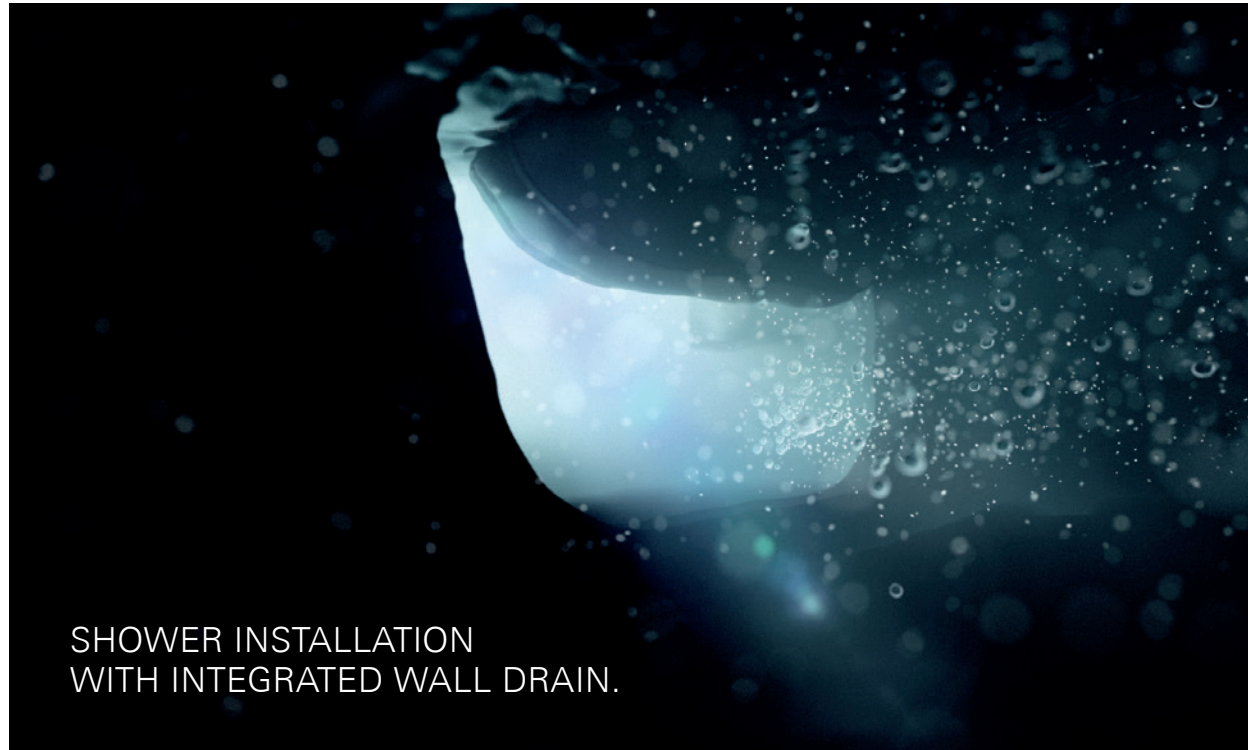

Users can choose to take a traditional fresh water shower. But, unlike a traditional home shower that delivers fresh water constantly, the new recirculating-water mode allows a longer shower while consuming as little fresh water as possible. This uses less energy than a conventional shower and conserves water that would otherwise go down the drain.

- 1 As with a regular shower, users begin showering with fresh water.
- 2 Once they are finished washing with shampoo and soap, activating the recirculating mode collects water in the drain, which is pumped into a separated closed circuit, maintaining the desired temperature and hygienically treating the water.
- 3 After use, the shower unit is cleaned ready for the next user.

GROHE EVERSTREAM

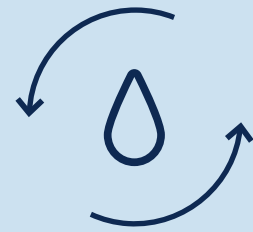

4 KEY FACTS ABOUT THE TECHNOLOGY BEHIND

GROHE EVERSTREAM

SAVE WATER - SAVE ENERGY

An average conventional shower consumes around 120 liters of fresh water in 10 minutes. Depending on your shower habits, a 10 minutes shower with GROHE Everstream could consume as little as 30 liters – leading to an overall water saving of up to 75%. Using recirculated water can also reduce energy consumption by up to 65%  compared with a conventional shower.

Up to 27,000 l

per year can be saved when using a shower that recycles water

* example calculation. Depends on individual shower habits.

 Calculation assumptions: 300 showers per year with a duration of 10 min each. The assumed shower temperature is 38° - heated up from 15°.
